Event Details:

This book club, in partnership with Halton Equity and Diversity Roundtable (HEDR) and Burlington, Milton, Oakville and Halton Hills Library, invites members of our communities to explore diverse titles that dig deeper into equity, diversity and inclusion.

Join our librarians, and passionate members of the Halton Equity & Diversity Roundtable, to discuss a diverse collection of books. This month we will be discussing: Unreconciled: Family, Truth and Indigenous Resistance by Jesse Wentz.

To register visit: <https://attend.opl.on.ca/event/6221621>

HEDR is a community wide initiative and collaborative of organizations, institutions, groups, businesses, and individual community members that is committed to building systemic inclusion and equity in Halton.

The learning outcomes for this program are:

1. Foster social inclusion and connection
2. Uphold and commit to our value of inclusion
3. Build awareness in our community of systemic oppression Registration is required.

Please review the guidelines and frequently asked questions on the Programs FAQ.

A copy of the book can be obtained by placing a hold on a digital or print copy at Burlington Public Library, Milton Public Library, Halton Hills Public Library or Oakville Public Library.

Filmmaker: Kahstoserakwathe Paulette Moore. Rating: PG

Synopsis: From 2011 - 2015 community members in Wisconsin's Penokee Hills on the south shore of Lake Superior challenged what would have been the world's largest taconite mine. The centerpiece of that challenge was the Anishinabe-led Harvest Education Learning Project: a five-acre protest/envisioning camp on the edge of the proposed mine site. In 2015 the mining company closed its doors and left the region. "From Wisconsin with Love: People of Harvest" is the story of what the community was fighting for from the perspective of Anishinabe.

be prophecy and practice - and what happened next.

Stories from Land Back Camp

June 30 (following From Wisconsin with Love, above)

26 minutes. Documentary

A film by Erik O'Neill. Co-directed by Erik O'Neill, Amy Smoke & Bangishimo

Rating: PG

Synopsis: On Indigenous peoples' day a large tepee was erected in a busy, urban park close to O:seKenhionhata: tie (Willow River, presently called the Grand River) with the intention to assert an Indigenous presence just for the day. Over 100 days later, the tepee still remained standing, with the space around it transformed into a camp of queer, Two Spirit, trans, and/or non-binary youth learning and practicing their Indigenous cultural heritages and demanding Land Back.
